The two research platforms Urban Arena (Lund University) and SLU Urban Futures (Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences) are joining forces during the International Transdisciplinarity Conference 2019. Together they arrange a place where practice meets academia, for practitioners and practice-oriented researchers to exhibit their work, finished or in progress, tackling urban sustainability in manifold ways. During the Opening Session of the Urban Forum | Practice meets Academia, we have the honour to invite four select project authors into a Free Talk, pre-figuring the Floor Talks which aim to bring together practitioners and academics to refine issues of societal importance in trans-disciplinary ways. In total, 12 project authors will engage with the audience to shed light on burning questions, critical aspects, inspiring findings, in a collegial atmosphere. We are convinced that the urban realm is the place where cluster problems are particularly manifest and where sustainability efforts can multiply exponentially and almost overnight – if we manage to mobilise action-oriented knowledge out of the exchange between practice and academia.
